Eek! Youngsters pull scary faces at the book launch of 'The Awfully Bad Guide to Monster Housekeeping' at Hoxton Hall

AROUND 90 budding writers celebrated the book launch of 'The Awfully Bad Guide To Monster Housekeeping' at Hoxton Hall on 3 November.

The event was organised by charity, Ministry of Stories (MOS), which aims to develop the writing skills of children and young people in the borough through a variety of workshops, talks and games. The charity's work centres around the Hoxton Street Monster Supplies shop, which stocks scary goods – such as jars of human snot and tins of a vague sense of unease – to get the youngsters' creative juices flowing. Supporters included 'About A Boy' writer, Nick Hornby and Hackney-based 'Submarine' author, Joe Dunthorne. For more info and pictures turn to pages 6&7

CARRYING THE FLAME

RESIDENTS will have the chance to welcome the Olympic flame as it travels through Hackney on 21 July.

As the flame passes through the borough – the weekend before it arrives at the Olympic Stadium for the 2012 opening ceremony on 27 July – Hackney's communities will come together for one massive party.

Details are set to be announced early next year, but the celebration is likely to feature a parade with entertainment, including food, music, dancing and colourful costumes.

The torch, by Hackney-based designers Edward Barber and Jay Osgerby, will cross the borough boundary from Tower Hamlets, travel through Hackney and head towards Waltham Forest, where it will make an evening stop.

The London Organising Committee of the Olympic and Paralympic Games (LOCOG) has revealed that 1,018 villages, towns and cities on the route will welcome the torch during its 70 day journey, with 8,000 torchbearers carrying the Olympic flame. As well as travelling on foot, the flame will travel by horseback, bicycle, tram and steam train from its starting point at Lands End, Cornwall, on the morning of 19 May.

Two other 2012 public participation programmes have also been launched by LOCOG: the Local Leaders' initiative, which invites people across the UK to create their own celebrations next year, and Get Set for the Olympic Torch Relay, an education resource available to all schools registered with Get Set. So far, 96 per cent of Hackney schools are signed up to the programme, giving them access to free Olympic and Paralympic tickets.

Happy shopper

THE 'Love Hackney, Shop Local' campaign is asking residents and visitors to support the borough's shops and markets and think twice about using plastic bags.

Over 100 businesses are supporting the Council-run scheme. In challenging economic times it's also as important as ever to support local businesses and suppliers.

Businesses participating in Love Hackney, Shop Local have pledged to:

- ask customers if they really need a carrier bag (rather than automatically providing one)

- store plastic carrier bags out of sight, behind counters
- offer reusable bags instead of plastic bags

The Co-operative group has achieved a 66 per cent reduction in the number of plastic carrier bags given to customers since 2006, through the introduction of similar measures.

Research has shown that each shopper uses 94 bags per year – so in Hackney that totals 19 million bags thrown away every year – equivalent to:

- 470 tonnes of carbon emissions

HACKNEY'S markets offer shoppers everything from fresh fruit and vegetables and foods from across the world, to fashion, jewellery, household and kitchen ware, domestic and electrical appliances and arts and handicrafts.

A free app is being created to demonstrate the history and diversity of Ridley Road Market

Down memory lane

A SMARTPHONE application is being developed to show how food, trade and immigration have helped create Ridley Road Market's identity.

The free app, called A Taste of Hackney, will show how the stalls and produce have reflected the diverse character of the area since the mid-19th century.

The app will

“It's the friendly faces of the traders that keep me coming back”

use animation and photography, as well as interviews with residents and research from the Hackney Archives, to reveal the history of the Dalston market.

The project is set to culminate in an exhibition next April to launch the app and associated website. Media arts firm, A Different Drum Productions, unveiled the project by recording oral histories at Ridley Road market over 13 and 14 October. More than 25 people were interviewed and their memories of the place recorded.

One participant said: “It's the friendly faces of the traders that have kept me coming back since the 70s.”

Another added: “I was dragged here every Saturday as a child, now I do the same to my kids.”

Visitors could also sample different global cuisines and get top tips on how to take a good photo to contribute to the project. Colvestone Primary School and Age UK are working with A Different Drum on the app. The project is supported by the Council and has been awarded a Heritage Lottery Fund grant.

The Council has invested over £1million on improvements to Ridley Road, including a new footway layout, bigger pitches for traders, new lighting, power bollards, electricity connections and drainage.

News in brief

Free cycling awareness courses for truck drivers

LORRY and bus drivers have been experiencing life on the road away from their usual perspective – by getting on their bikes.

The Council is running free bike awareness courses for heavy goods drivers to improve the safety of cyclists on the borough's roads.

The innovative programme gets them out of their vehicles and into the saddle to gain a better understanding of what it's like to ride a bike on Hackney's busy roads. It is the first accredited course of its kind to be run by a local authority.

John Harvey, a goods driver who attended the course in August, said: “It has made me aware of cyclist road positioning. I now understand the importance of giving more space to cyclists.”

Trevor Parsons, co-ordinator of the London Cycling Campaign in Hackney, said: “This is one of the most inspiring responses yet. We hope that this will help to build a culture of mutual understanding on our streets.”

Baroness visits new academy

A UNITED Nations senior official visited a Hackney school to celebrate its new status as an academy.

Baroness Amos, the under-secretary-general for humanitarian affairs at the UN, met with students at Clapton Girls' Academy on 2 November.

Speaking at the event, she said: “I am impressed by the young women I have met today at Clapton Girls' Academy and have no doubt that they will go on to great things. Educating girls is the key to development in many of the poorest communities in the world.”

Early in her career, Baroness Amos worked at the Council before heading up the Equal Opportunities Commission, becoming the first black woman to sit in Cabinet and the first black leader of the House of Lords.

Clapton Girls' Academy is rated as ‘outstanding’ by school inspection body Ofsted.

Older residents in the borough show their competitive spirit is still strong at the Annual Club Wellness Inter-borough Games

Live the good life

OLDER people showed that competitiveness never truly slows down with age – when a group of residents battled it out in this year's Annual Club Wellness

Inter-borough Games.

Five hundred older people from across London travelled to Brixton Recreation Centre for a day of sporting competition on 14 October. Open to over 55s across all skill levels, the competition was set up to highlight the social and physical benefits sporting activities can offer.

“It is one of the best days I've ever had. It was fantastic to see so many communities coming together”

Competing against 16 other boroughs, Hackney fielded badminton, swimming, indoor bowls and cycling teams. A team from Epsom and Ewell was the overall winner.

Former Coronation

Street star, Beverly Callard, who played barmaid Liz McDonald, also attended the event and presented the awards.

She said: “I was so honoured to be invited to the event. It is one of the best days I've ever had. “It was fantastic to see so many communities coming together. It really was a brilliant day.”

Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, Cllr Jonathan McShane, added: “Well done to everyone who took part. Exercise is a great way to keep fit and live a healthy life.”

The event was organised by GLL, which manages the Council's leisure centres throughout the borough.

Older residents can take part in weekly Club Wellness sessions at Kings Hall, Britannia, Clissold and Queensbridge leisure centres. They can also sign up for New Age Games.

News in brief

Tickets to see the Goalball test event were oversubscribed

Residents snap up free 2012 Games test event tickets

NEARLY 2,000 residents will receive free tickets to two test events taking place in the Handball Arena, giving them the chance to be among the first spectators to walk through the Olympic Park.

The free tickets offer, launched by the Council last month, was oversubscribed by 36 per cent. All applications went into a ballot and preference was given to residents closest to the Park. A total of 700 tickets to the London Handball Cup and 535 for International Goalball will be given to the lucky winners later this month, with 480 more going to Hackney schools.

Priority booking for residents to buy tickets to three further test events, including gymnastics, diving and cycling, will run from 8am on Tuesday, 15 November, to 9am on Thursday, 17 November using the HACKNEYPREPARES code at: www.ticketmaster.co.uk/londonpreparesseries. Tickets will be allocated on a first come first served basis.

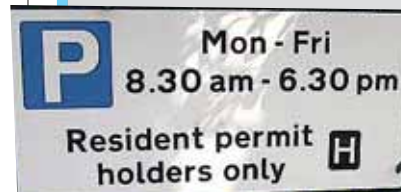

Parking changes planned during the Olympic Games

THE Council is working with organisers of the Olympic and Paralympic Games (LOCOG) to ensure residents and local businesses are given priority when parking spaces come under pressure next summer, in areas close to the Olympic Park.

The 2012 events will attract large numbers of spectators, some of whom may try to park as close as they can to venues in the Olympic Park. The Council is proposing bringing in extra temporary resident and business parking protection areas to prevent spectators from taking all the spaces. Further details will be published nearer the time, and those affected will be contacted to explain any new arrangements. For more information, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/parking-where-to-park

A monster read

Hoxton Hall played host to a scary book launch

Top: Young people enjoy the launch of 'The Awfully Bad Guide to Monster Housekeeping'; Nick Hornby attended the event (above)

FOG pours off the stage, thunder cracks indoors, a parent clings to the wall in fear that someone, or something, is going to jump out at them while stood next to jars of human snot and tins of creeping dread. It was all terribly unnerving – for a book launch.

Creative writing charity, Ministry of Stories (MOS), has been feeding the imaginations of Hackney youngsters for almost a year. Inspired by a similar model in the United States, the charity helps eight to 18-year-olds develop their writing skills through workshops, one-to-one mentoring and games.

The charity has just published 'The Awfully Bad Guide To Monster Housekeeping' – its first book-length anthology, “Literacy is the key to more or less everything, in terms of employment, confidence and all you need for adult life”

– written by children and young people from St John the Baptist, St Monica's and Burbage primary schools. Around 90 of the budding writers celebrated the launch at Hoxton Hall on 3 November.

Also at the event was 'About A Boy' author, Nick

Hornby, who co-founded MOS with entrepreneurs Lucy Macnab and Ben Payne.

"I've always wanted to start a project like this in London," said Nick.

"Literacy is the key to more or less everything, in terms of employment, confidence and everything you need for adult life. We know teachers are hard pressed so we provide extra help," he added.

Ronnel Gyamfi, 11, who read his piece out loud at the book launch, said: "My story was about a monster who wanted a footballer to join their team. I felt confident reading there.”

Top left, clockwise: MOS co-director Lucy Macnab; budding writers pretend to be monsters; a selection of scary goods from Hoxton Street Monster Supplies; a shadow in the shop; youngsters read their stories

The charity’s work centres around a shop in Hoxton Street, called ‘Hoxton Street Monster Supplies’. Part wartime ration shop, part horror movie set, its tongue-in-cheek products epitomise the British love of word play and satire.

“The products in the shop are for monsters. If you’re feeling short of terror, you can buy a tin of it! They are actually sweets with a short story inside, while the impacted earwax is fudge,” Nick said.

“It’s good for kids to be in an environment that looks like fun, but we’re actually tricking them into writing,” he added.

Other writers, including Hackney-based ‘Submarine’ author, Joe Dunthorne, also support the MOS project, along with retired teachers and media professionals.

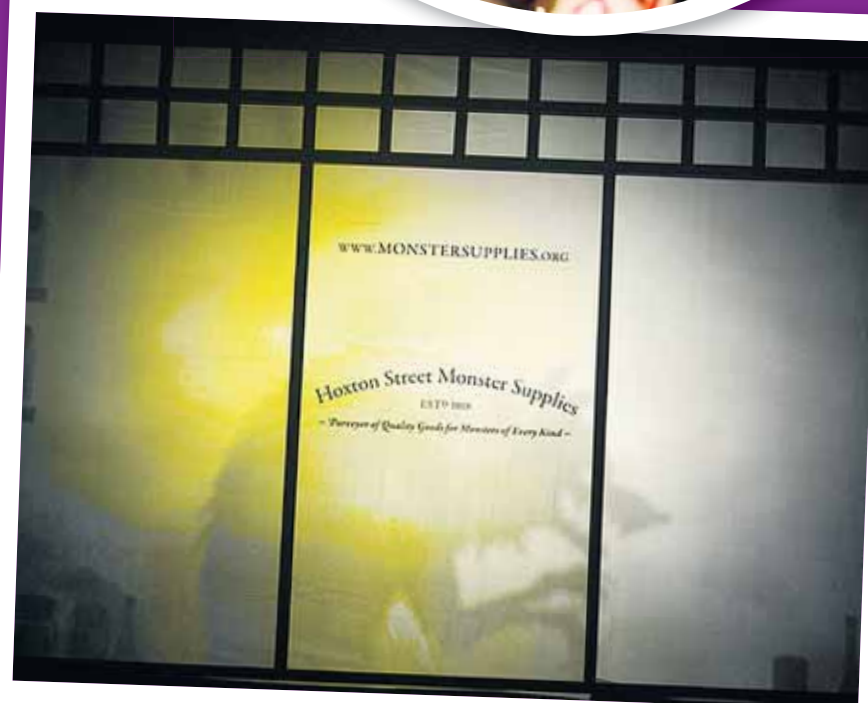

Many volunteer their time to work in the shop, give classes or get involved in programmes for children in the borough.

“We’ve had 1,400 people put their names down to volunteer and there has been overwhelming support from across the artistic community.

The Council hands out 2012 Olympic Games tickets to young sports winners

THE borough's budding sports stars have all received tickets to the 2012 Olympic Games.

Winners of the Hackney Sports Awards 2011 will be given a 'golden ticket' to next year's event. Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, made the announcement on 2 November.

He said: "I'm delighted to be able to announce that the winners of tonight's sports awards – and others who have excelled at sport – will each receive a ticket to the 2012

"The Council wanted to ensure that the very people from Hackney who ought to get into the Games are able to do so – and that's what these tickets will help achieve."

The 131 ticket winners also included recipients of the Council-run Youth

Sport Fund, which was set up to provide financial support for the borough's young athletes and sporting organisations; members of the most improved teams and medallists at this year's London Youth Games; and champions for the Personal Bests primary schools sports programme.

The awards, held at Hackney Empire, are now in their sixth year. They recognise the achievements of the borough's up and coming sporting stars who have participated at local, county or national level in various events over the past year.

Kim Pham, 17, who was crowned Sports Personality of the Year, said: "I can't believe I'm going to see the Olympics. I'm aiming to compete in the 2014 Commonwealth Games and seeing top

There were also awards for volunteering, services to sport, inclusion and coach of the year.

Takeshi Bailey, 19, who received the Voluntary Services to Sport and Physical Activity award, said: "We all have talents and I want to engage with young people because it's what I enjoy doing."

Comedian Kat B compered the night, and special guest, former Team GB high jumper, Dalton Grant, who was born in Hackney, presented some of the awards to this year's winners.

"I wanted to be a footballer but high jump chose me. I'd advise any young person to give athletics a try as you never know where your talent lies," he said.

London Youth Games medallists were also given a year's free gym membership to the borough's leisure centres by operator GLL.

Hackney entered 42 teams in this year's London Youth Games, made up of 506 young people, aged eight to 18. Between November 2010 and this July, they competed against the other 32 London boroughs across 29 sports. With four teams, and 41 individual medals, Hackney finished 16th – its best placing in over 30 years.

On track for 2012

Daniel Davis, who works at The Urswick School, is on course to represent Team GB for the 110m hurdles at the 2012 Olympic Games

THE end-of-day school bell marks the start of another gruelling training session for a Hackney sports coach as he pursues his Olympic dream.

By July 2012, Daniel Davis, a sports technician at The Urswick School in Paragon Road, E9, will know whether he's made Team GB for the 110m hurdles. "All the hard work I'm putting in – hours and hours at the track and gym – all of it is geared towards about 13 seconds of running," he says.

To make the team, Daniel needs to run 13.5 seconds or quicker at next year's qualifiers. With a personal best of 13.97 seconds, and a punishing six-day training schedule, he's on course to reach this demanding target.

The Bournemouth-born runner adds: "I train with Tony Jarrett, the fastest English hurdler of all time, who's been to the Olympics and done it all. So I'm really confident in him."

Daniel began his sports career as a sprinter but aged 11 'found it boring just running in a straight line'. He reflects: "I was at the track one day and saw a group of older kids hurdling. So I just thought I'd give it a go and that's how it started."

Daniel claims he initially wasn't a natural hurdler. "I was no good when I began. But I was a fast runner, so I'd take ages in the air and then run really fast in between," he says.

But his efforts to improve were spurred on by other young athletes at his club, Sutton and District AC, including fellow hurdler Ricky Alexis-Smith and Team GB sprinter Harry Aikines-Aryeetey.

Working in spitting distance of the Olympic Park is a real motivator. "I don't want to be sitting in the crowds. I want to be on the start line. Having that so close to you makes you want to work so much harder," he says.

“I don't want to be sitting in the crowds. I want to be on the start line”

The Urswick School, a specialist sports college, will soon unveil a brand new sports centre. As a coach, Daniel's job includes encouraging those with sporting talent to reach their potential.

"The kids have seen me run on TV and a few have even turned up to support me at the races. If they can see me live my dream then hopefully they will also be inspired to do the same – whether that's playing for the school team, or playing for England," he comments.

Daniel is lucky to be able to combine his training with a job that he gets great enjoyment from.

"I love working in Hackney and I couldn't see myself working with any other pupils. They aren't afraid to be themselves and are really honest, good kids. It's their honesty that really gets to me and keeps me humble because it reminds me that this is where I came from."

"Someone took the time with me and pushed me to achieve, so you have always got to take your time with the children you meet," he concludes.

All your recycling questions answered

Q: I took my old CRT monitor to an electronic recycling bank, but I was disappointed that I couldn't fit it in, so I took it back home, what do I do now?

A: Electrical recycling banks in Hackney are only for small items, such as hairdryers, chargers, clocks and shavers. Anything larger than A4 size won't fit in. Larger items such as TVs, printers and computer monitors must not be left next to the banks. These can instead be recycled through the Council's bulky waste service, which offers free removal of five items per collection, and up to four collections per household each year. Clara, a pupil from Millfields school, picks an apple

Children from Millfields primary school show off the fruit and veg they picked from an organic farm

Food, glorious food

BOROUGH schools have been holding farmers' markets as part of a programme to teach pupils about where their food comes from.

Earlier this year youngsters from Jubilee, Sebright and Millfields primaries spent time on an organic farm, experiencing everything from cheese-making and keeping hens, to growing and harvesting vegetables.

The pupils then applied their new knowledge by setting up farmers' markets and selling school-grown food, as well as produce from local, and sometimes organic, manufacturers.

The schoolchildren are fully involved in running the stalls, enabling them to learn about the importance of sustainability, locally produced food and animal welfare.

The money raised goes towards more farm visits or food education.

The project was developed as part of the Soil Association Farm Academy programme, which helps schoolchildren to learn about farming and food, connecting local producers with the community.

The next market will be held at Millfields school, E5, on 9 December. Teacher Roz Wilson, said: "The scheme is really important to help pupils realise where their food comes from. The pupils will become champions for helping to promote healthy eating in the wider community."

The zero waste challenge

RESIDENTS are being urged to watch their waste and help the environment, while saving money.

The Council and North London Waste Authority is holding a series of events across the borough as part of European Week for Waste Reduction, from 19 to 27 November.

A recipe roadshow at Hackney Service Centre, E8, from 2-5pm on 24 November, will give practical information on making lunches from leftovers.

Mapledene and Queensbridge Children Centre, E8, will host a Nappacino event, from 10am to 12noon, on 25 November, offering advice over coffee on reusable nappies. There will also be a baby and maternity wear clothes swapping event at Islington Ecology Centre, N5, from 10.30-11.30am.

In addition, residents can take up the Zero Waste Challenge and monitor what they produce by downloading an info pack from the Council website.

Return a monitoring sheet before the end of November and be entered into a prize draw to win one of five organic vegetable boxes.

In the lead up to the week, young people across the borough will be taking part in activities to help reduce waste. An educational theatre group is also set to visit Bethnal, St John & St James and Shacklewell primary schools, on 11 and

Residents are urged to reuse, recycle and reduce waste in Hackney 14 November, to perform a show about how changing eating behaviour can reduce the amount of food wasted across the borough.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "Waste prevention is a priority for the Council and this is an informative week for residents to see how their contributions can help to reduce, reuse, and recycle waste in Hackney."

Macabre Resurrections

16-25 Nov, St Mary's Church, Church Street, N16 9ES

IT is perhaps not so commonly known that some of the formative years of US poet and author Edgar Allan Poe were spent in Hackney, where he attended the Reverend John Bransby's Manor House School in Stoke Newington. A selection of the darker products of Poe's adult mind will now be recreated at the site of his youthful experiences, St Mary's Church.

'Macabre Resurrections' is a project by Second Skin Theatre which has brought to life five of the writer's most sinister stories, including The Black Cat, The Pit and the Pendulum, and Premature Burial.

With scripts by some of the country's most acclaimed emerging writers, each play has been adapted for a contemporary audience and will be performed in a different part of the churchyard at St Mary's Rectory.

According to its founders, English-US duo Andy McQuade and William Whitehurst, Second Skin Theatre aims to challenge, provoke debate and 'uncover the darker truths we all carry'. The company's most recent revival of some of the classics tales of the horror genre, promises to take its audience far out of their comfort zone.

Feeling peckish? Research shows 20 per cent of schoolchildren eligible for free meals are missing out

PARENTS and carers are being urged to claim free school meals for their child, after research found that 20 per cent of those eligible may be missing out.

Government figures show that close to 40 per cent of Hackney families could apply for free school meals. But data from The Learning Trust – which runs education services in the borough – found one in five are not taking this up. At secondary school, this figure rises to over a quarter of eligible pupils.

Families receiving Income Support, or similar benefits, are entitled to apply for free school meals, with an average saving of £390 a year. The Learning Trust has launched a campaign to persuade parents to apply.

As well as a financial break for parents and health benefits for pupils, schools receive additional funding for every child that receives free meals.

Cllr Rita Krishna, Cabinet Member for Children's Services, said: "School meals are an excellent way to ensure your child has a healthy lunch, which is proven to aid concentration in lessons."

News in brief

Youngsters' achievements recognised at awards

SOME of the borough's most determined children and young people were recognised in the Jack Petchey Achievement Awards.

Over 100 students were presented with medals and certificates at the awards ceremony in Stoke Newington Town Hall on 1 November. The awards recognise young people's personal accomplishments and services to the community.

Those honoured included Esme Kirk, 15, who battled through dyslexia to excel as a GCSE grade A student; Damilola Fasulu, 14, who won for her work on a Save the Children project involving a live link-up with Bangladesh; and Courtney Finch, 13, for her project to help primary pupils prepare for the move to secondary school.

All winners received medals, certificates and a £200 cheque for their school. The show was organised by the Jack Petchey Foundation, which aims to develop the potential among young people across London.

Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Susan Fajana-Thomas, said: "It was great to be part of tonight's celebrations. A big well done to the Jack Petchey Foundation."

Hackney College wins two events at sports festival

HACKNEY Community College (HCC) has taken second place in the third annual Host Boroughs Inter College Sports Festival.

Four hundred students from nine colleges in 2012 host boroughs took part. HCC won two of the 11 events, including cricket and indoor rowing.

The games, from 7 to 14 October, aimed to widen participation in sport by targeting students that wouldn't usually represent their college in competitions.

Paul Lazarus, head of sport, said: "Every Hackney student represented the college proudly and displayed great sportsmanship, respect, enthusiasm and commitment to their opponents and their chosen sports. Congratulations to everyone involved."

Brighten up!

KINGSMEAD Primary School pupils have helped paint eight community murals in Homerton.

The London 2012-inspired wall paintings can now be seen across Kingsmead Estate, E9.

Artist Ryan Durrant and writer Penny Cliff worked with the youngsters, as well as residents and community groups, to come up with ideas to visually transform the estate.

These workshops were run by environmental charity ecoACTIVE. The final designs were then produced using recycled paints.

The end result sees four estate walkways brightened up by paintings based on Olympic values of respect, excellence, friendship, courage, determination, inspiration and equality.

The project was funded by Sanctuary Housing and the Council. An afternoon of games and music was held to mark the unveiling of the murals on 18 October.

Kingsmead Primary School pupils proudly show off their mural

Resident Saada Omar said: "This project has been a great idea and has involved everyone from the start. The kids loved the painting days and are now very proud of the finished murals. Every time we go past, they shout to passersby that they painted them."

Sanctuary's regional director, Stephanie Killer, added: "The murals will leave a lasting legacy on the estate."

Candid camera

A SELF-CONFESSED bashful teenager has been crowned overall winner of a competition to document life for young people living next to the Olympic Park.

Connie Smyth, 15, won the London Legacy 2020 Photo Awards, after impressing judges with her picture 'Rust', a shot of a lamppost beneath railway arches in London Fields.

The project saw 90 students from Hackney and Tower Hamlets think about, and snap, where they live from a photo-journalist's perspective.

She said: "I did not think that I would win, I was quite shocked, but I could not be more proud. I found the location work quite difficult, as I'm quite shy and so wasn't very

"I am glad that I was able to show others something extraordinary about the place where I live" comfortable approaching people. I suppose that's why I looked for other things to photograph. I thought the lamp was beautiful. I am glad that I was able to show others something extraordinary about the place where I live."

As a reward for her efforts, she won £1,000 worth of camera equipment, including a digital SLR, as well as the opportunity to carry out a photo-shoot with the English National Ballet.

Also at the 8 November event Amy Nguyen, 15, won the 'place' category, with Cansu Bozdagan, 18, and Melanny Marin, 18, coming runner-up; Evelina Sneigon, 18, came second in 'art'; while Bliss Kelly, 15, Gabriela Barzyk, 15, Philipa McInstosh, 18, were all commended.

The project was developed by London Legacy 2020, CMS Cameron McKenna and Thomson Reuters.

Look to the stars

A BOROUGH classroom could be spinning into orbit – metaphorically – as an annual competition to win a science lesson with Professor Brian Cox returns.

Children, teachers and parents can nominate their school to have a class with the TV physicist for The Big Bang Lesson: Take 2. The lesson forms part of a nationwide initiative by The Big Bang team, which aims to inspire young people through science.

The winning group will be whisked off to Jodrell Bank Observatory in Manchester for the workshop, get up close to the giant Lovell telescope and discover more about the solar system. Brian, formerly of 1990s band D:Ream, said: "Science has always been my passion and it's so rewarding to show youngsters of all ages that they too can play a part in answering some of life's biggest questions with the help of science, technology, engineering and maths.

"The scientific world is hugely fascinating and moving, and if it's taught in the right way, it can be tremendously inspiring and a lot of fun."

The deadline for entries is 5 December.

Brain injury survivors built an outdoor pizza oven and now cook tasty pizzas for the community

Cooking up a feast

A GROUP of brain injury survivors built an outdoor wood fired oven at the Towpath Café, on Regent's Canal, as part of a rehabilitation project.

Members constructed the oven from materials donated by Allen Build Contractors and were trained by E5 Bakehouse staff to make a pizza.

Over 100 people attended its inaugural opening on 24 October, which saw them plough through 60 pizzas in just three hours. More than £500 was raised for the brain injury charity Headway East London from the event.

The project is part of its occupational programme, which aims to engage brain injury survivors with social networking, learning and community building skills. The longer term goal is to build a community kitchen in Hackney to encourage healthy eating and a sense of community.

Headway member Howard said: "It's an open pizza oven, so it's really unique and that must entice people to think about pizza. You've got to come back for another one... or two... or three."

Guest Meg Hillier, MP for Hackney South and Shoreditch, added: "This is a fun way to raise Headway East London's profile. It's also really important for people who are finding difficulty getting into employment to have the opportunity to build confidence and skills."

News in brief

Free breathing tests to spot early signs of lung disease

HOMERTON hospital is offering free breathing tests to help spot early signs of a form of lung disease.

Chronic obstructive pulmonary disease is an irreversible lung illness that causes serious breathing problems and kills around 30,000 people a year.

Early diagnosis can slow the progression of the smoking-related disease and diagnosis can be made by having a simple breathing test.

On 16 November, health care professionals will be offering tests to measure lung capacity at Homerton hospital, Homerton Row, E9, from 10am to 3pm; and Morrison's supermarket, 47-49 Stamford Hill, N16, from 11am to 3pm.

For more information call Homerton hospital on: 020 8510 5555.

Volunteers wanted for dust mite induced-asthma trial

VOLUNTEERS are needed for a new allergy and asthma study being conducted at Homerton hospital.

Adults affected by house dust mite-induced asthma are being asked to take part.

Participants must be over 18 years of age, have had asthma caused by house dust mites for at least a year and must regularly use inhaled asthma medication.

Anyone taking part in the trial will have to visit the hospital 13 times from now until spring 2013, and will be provided with asthma medication throughout.

Dr Raja Rajakulasingam of the hospital's allergy clinic said: "The aim of the trial is to investigate if an allergy vaccination taken with a specific house dust mite allergy tablet can reduce asthma symptoms and daily intake of asthma medication."

Increased awareness for dementia

AN ADVERTISING campaign has been launched to raise awareness of the early signs of dementia.

Families are being urged to look out for symptoms, such as memory loss, anxiety and confusion, among their elderly relatives. They are then advised to contact their GP.

According to the charity Alzheimer's Society, there were an estimated 1,435 people living with the condition in Hackney in 2010.

Many of the borough's NHS services for older residents with mental health problems are based at the Community Mental Health Team (CMHT) for Older People in Hackney Wick. The service supports those with the illness, their carers and families.

The borough's Alzheimer's Society also offers advice, group meetings, social events and a befriending project.

Sue Grant, Befriending Manager at the society said: "Volunteers visit people with dementia in their homes."

A campaign has been launched to raise the profile of dementia

Clockwise from above: West Hackney Church before it was bombed; map location from 1868; the interior of the church; West Hackney Parish Magazine

A Greek legacy

AS Hackney expanded and its population grew during the early 19th century, new parishes were created and churches built to cater for the increased number of worshippers.

The old parish of St John-at-Hackney was divided into three in the 1820s. South Hackney parish focussed around the old St John's chapel, which was enlarged to become the church of St John of Jerusalem; while West Hackney parish centred around a new church on the east side of where Amhurst and Evering Roads now meet Stoke Newington Road.

Officially known as West Hackney, the church was sometimes also called St James's, although this name was rarely used. West Hackney Church was designed by Sir Robert Smirke in the style of a Greek temple. Work began on 17 November, 1821, and was carried out by builders Croggon and Co of Lambeth.

Smirke was one of the leading proponents of Greek Revival architecture and was responsible for designing the main block of the British Museum. The original estimate of building costs was £16,500, although it eventually came to £18,000, while the land was a gift from the Lord of the Manor of Hackney, William George Daniel Tyssen.

A service of consecration by the Bishop of London was held on 10 April, 1824, with the new church holding 2,000 people.

In 1839, it was noted that it quickly filled without any noticeable lessening in numbers at the central parish church of St John-at-Hackney.

But perhaps Smirke's classical design seemed somewhat cold and formal as a number of small alterations and additions were made to the church over the years.

In 1842, a stained glass window was installed above the altar, which was a copy of the altarpiece at Magdalen College Chapel, Oxford.

The glass, however, was thin and quickly suffered weather erosion. It eventually had to be replaced as it became too dangerous – a piece once crashed down on to the altar while Holy Communion was being celebrated.

The Rev Thomas Hugo, rector from 1868 to 1870, made many changes to what was once described as 'this grandiose if somewhat unlovely church', adding an Italianate pulpit and English Gothic altarpiece – which would have resulted in a very strange mixture of styles.

Indeed, Hugo was a generous man who paid for many of the church's alterations from his own pocket.

Sadly, the splendours of West Hackney Church were almost all lost in the Second World War when it was bombed during the Blitz in September 1940. The damage was so bad, that restoring the church was felt to be impossible, and it was subsequently demolished. The smaller church of St Paul was built in 1960 on the same site.

West Hackney Recreation Ground now covers much of the 2.5

acres where the old church and churchyard stood.

The churchyard had become neglected, but recently Groundwork London has been working with St Paul's to revitalise the green space.

In August, the churchyard was awarded £47,500 development funding by the Heritage Lottery Fund, which will be used to stabilise the headstones, recreate the original planting designs and increase community involvement in the site.

The Mayor and Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2010.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

Recipes straight from the ovens at Waterhouse

www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk

FIRST appearing in print as a recipe in the 19th century, Shepherd's Pie remains a comforting autumnal favourite. Waterhouse commis chef-in-training, Jack O' Neill, shares his take on the meal.

"There are so many reasons why I love Shepherd's Pie," says Jack. "It's a great showcase for British lamb, potatoes and cheddar and one of the heartiest, homeliest things you can eat. It's easy not to appreciate the simple things, but potatoes like the super mashable Rooster variety that are in shops now are fantastic."

Shepherd's Pie

Serves 4

Preparation time
30 mins

Cooking time
90 mins

Ingredients

- 500g lamb mince
- Olive oil
- 1 onion, diced
- 1 carrot, diced
- 4 gloves garlic, diced
- 3 tablespoons tomato puree
- 1 glass red wine
- 2 tsp flour
- ½ bunch parsley
- 8-10 springs thyme
- 50g butter
- 1kg mashed potatoes (Rooster, King Edward, Desiree or Maris Piper will produce great results) boiled until tender
- 50-75g Cheddar cheese
- Salt and pepper

Method

- Brown lamb mince in a generously sized frying pan with olive oil. Set aside
- In the frying pan previously used for the lamb, sweat the onion, carrot and garlic for a few minutes. Return mince and add tomato puree and wine and cook for 10-15 mins. Add flour to thicken juices
- Mash potatoes with butter, chopped parsley, thyme, half the cheddar, salt and pepper in a saucepan over a low heat
- Spread mince across the bottom of a 20cm x 20cm baking dish. Cover with mash and grate over the rest of cheddar
- Bake in the oven for around 30 mins at 200C. The top should be a delicious golden brown.

THE Council has consulted Shoreditch residents about proposed changes to parking restrictions in the area. Residents and businesses were generally in favour of the Controlled Parking Zone (CPZ) proposals, including the location and type of parking bays, the introduction of motorcycle parking permits and parking control hours.

As a result of the level of feedback, operational hours for Zone B North will remain Monday to Saturday, 8.30am to midnight.

There was also majority support for existing restrictions, therefore Zone B South hours will remain Monday to Friday, 8.30am to 6.30pm; and Saturday, 8.30am to 1.30pm.

Also from 5 December, motorcycle users will no longer be permitted to park in bays without a permit. Signs will be put up explaining the new policy and making it clear when enforcement will begin.

All residents and businesses in the CPZ will receive a summary booklet and a map which outlines the final design changes.

For more info, call parking services on: 020 8356 8877; e-mail: consultparking@hackney.gov.uk; or alternatively visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/ek-zone-b
